We sell world travel on a 20 m² floor plan

“As a start-up travel agency, we book trips, take calls from customers, connect with other travel agencies, and plan itineraries – all within the confines of our 20 m² office. Despite the challenge, we have optimised our limited space and created a multi-functional area that accommodates our work, storage, meetings, and social activities.”

"Monitor stands with drawers hold smaller office supplies and help keep the desk tidy. We added a convenient noticeboard where we pin important telephone numbers and to-do lists."

"Our compact office space is functional and efficient. These shallow cabinets are perfectly suited to our limited space, providing ample storage for binders, documents and clothes such as shoes and coats."

"Our team has created a cosy corner using the light-weight drawer unit. It provides an area for coffee breaks or catching up on pending tasks."

"But that's not all - our cabinets have also been transformed into a clever kitchenette for our lunches. We store tableware, utensils and a microwave for heating food."

Our office is a calm place in the heart of the city

“When we step inside our cosy accounting firm in the morning, we feel relaxed and ready to focus on our clients’ financials. Our coordinated set-up is inspired by the classic, industrial age, where the limited space must not stand in the way of comfort, performance and good results.”

"See the rounded corners? They are part of the design that creates a stylish and cohesive theme throughout the office."

"We adore the green steel cabinet. It holds everything from the bulkiest binders to the smallest paper clips – plus the splash of colour adds character to the place."

Ergonomic solutions for a healthier you

Whether working in an office or at home, many of us spend the majority of the day at a desk. Sometimes, working for longer periods in a bad or uncomfortable position can cause neck and back injuries as well as other health problems.

An ergonomic workspace is one that is customised to your personal needs, allowing you to work in a comfortable and safe way. Since we are all different shapes and sizes, it is important to have an ergonomic workspace that is adapted to your body. This not only benefits your health and well-being; it also contributes to improved focus and productivity.

Feel good and work better

We want to help you achieve an ergonomic working environment that suits you and promotes good health. This means adjusting the workspace to your needs, adopting an ergonomic position and keeping as mobile as possible. The human body is made to move, so ideally your workspace should give you the choice of sitting, standing and leaning, allowing you to change positions often. And if you feel good at work, you will work better.

Nine steps to good ergonomics in your workspace

1. Ensure an ergonomic chair

An ergonomic office chair provides proper support for the back, neck, and arms, reducing the risk of discomfort and musculoskeletal issues. It promotes good posture, improves blood circulation and allows for greater comfort and productivity throughout the workday.

Always look for an office chair with good lumbar support and a variety of features that can be adjusted to fit your body.

Find out more about how adjustability increases your comfort on pages 88-97.

2. Enable switching between sitting leaning and standing

A height-adjustable desk allows you to change position often. Alternating between sitting and standing reduces the risk of injury and increases circulation, as well as productivity.

A sit/stand support enables a position between sitting and standing, and is ideal when you have a height-adjustable desk. It provides freedom of movement, activates and strengthens the core muscles of your body and improves blood circulation.

The top of your work surface should be elbow height and your elbows should be at a 90° angle when sitting or standing at your desk.

3. Improve the acoustic environment

Acoustic screens absorb and reduce sounds such as laughing, ringtones and typing, creating a quieter and more focused environment. They provide privacy, minimise interruptions and contribute to a more peaceful and productive workspace. Curtains, rugs and other textiles also help absorb sound. Find out more about how to improve your acoustic environment on pages 36-47

4. Position your monitor correctly

Make sure your monitor is not placed too close. With your chair pulled in and arms stretched in front of you, you should not be able to touch the screen. The monitor should be placed directly in front of you, with the top just below eye level. A monitor stand allows you to position your screen at the right level, reducing strain on your neck and promoting better posture.

5. Hide messy cables

Cable management creates a clean and organised workspace, reducing visual clutter and promoting a sense of calm. It gives easier access to devices and prevents tripping hazards. Desktop-mounted solutions add convenience and prevent strains from bending and reaching for outlets under the desk.

6. Combine different types of lighting

Proper lighting reduces eye strain, enhances focus and creates a comfortable and inviting atmosphere. Usually, a combination of different types of lighting is ideal.

General lighting provides a uniform light throughout the room.

Task lighting such as a desk lamp, provides a concentrated beam of light over a limited area.

Mood lighting provides a cosy feeling and softens the contrasts between general and task lighting.

Sunlight is always welcome, but it can cause glare and reflections on your computer screen. Place your desk/ computer so the light comes in from the side. Use blinds or curtains on the windows to filter or block out daylight when you need to.

7. Relieve pressure on knees and feet

A standing mat is ideal for those who stand for long periods at their desks as the high-density foam relieves pressure on the feet, knees and back.

A footrest helps you sit in a good working position at your desk and reduces strain on your legs, back and neck.

8. Ensure ease of maintenance

A dynamic workplace may take many shapes throughout the workday as furniture is moved around for meetings or impromptu collaboration. Office furniture that is lightweight, on wheels, easy to move and park prevents muscle strain and enables seamless teamwork.

9. Invite elements of nature into your workspace

We have known for a long time that nature has a positive effect on us humans. A bike ride in the park, a walk in the woods or taking in the waves on the beach – the connection to nature makes us feel good. What happens if we can reproduce this effect indoors? Biophilic design is a concept that uses interior design to link our indoor environment with nature. Workplaces with natural light, natural ventilation and elements connected to nature have been shown to improve performance, lower stress and increase motivation.

Colour. Tone on tone colours, close to nature's own colours create a feeling of calm and harmony, helping us to relax and focus.

Material. The materials you choose, such as a warm wood veneer or a tactile material that feels soft to the touch is also a way to bring nature indoors. It is inviting, and we feel good taking it in.

Organic shapes and patterns such as those found on leaves, animals, water and sand make us think of the outside world – they feel familiar and help us to relax.

Greenery in the workspace has been shown to have a calming effect, helping to reduce stress and when we think beyond potted plants in the window, there is a lot we can do. For instance, plants can be used to create room dividers or cozy rooms-within-a-room.

Why acoustics matters

Today, many offices are designed with open floor plans that expose us to noise and visual distractions, influencing our ability to focus. Ring sounds, chattering colleagues, fingers typing away on the keyboard, screeching chairs – all these and other sounds amount to the disturbing noise levels we often experience at our workplace. Fortunately, there are ways to work around this.

Happy and healthy workspaces involve finding the right noise-reducing solutions and possibilities to create privacy. That's where our acoustic products step in, designed with your well-being in mind to enhance your comfort and productivity.

What is room acoustics?

Room acoustics is how sound travels or behaves within a room or any given space. Without elements to absorb sound or prevent sound waves from bouncing back and forth, we perceive the acoustic environment as disharmonious.

Reverberation time is the time it takes for sound to cease, depending on the size of the room and the objects and materials in the room that absorb sound. With simple measures, we can improve room acoustics and reverberation time to create quieter spaces that are more conducive to working and collaborating.

When there is nothing to block or absorb the sound, the sound waves bounce around the room making the acoustic environment disharmonious for everyone in the surroundings.

The less the sound bounces around, the shorter the reverberation time, which leads to better acoustics and speech intelligibility.

5 steps to good acoustics in the workplace

1. Work with sound absorption.

Non-porous materials like glass, MDF or concrete cause sound to reflect, creating echoes while porous materials like curtains, seat covers and rugs absorb sound. Acoustic products like desk screens and floor-standing screens also absorb sound and help to balance the presence of non-porous materials.

3. Place furniture strategically.

Voices, ring tones, footsteps and other sounds can be softened with acoustic screens and room dividers with green plants. Shelves with books can also help. If possible, prevent unwanted noise altogether by placing printers and coffee machines in separate rooms. Ensure chairs on legs are fitted with felt pads and those on castors roll on sound-absorbing material. Drawer dampers also make a big difference.

2. Block the sound.

Divide the space into separate acoustic zones using various types of barriers to prevent sound from traveling freely in an open landscape or between two workstations. Desk and floor-standing acoustic screens as well as acoustic screens on castors are ideal for this purpose.

4. Use textiles.

Curtains, rugs, plants and other porous, soft objects help absorb sound waves. Use curtains with a thick fabric and hang them a bit out from the wall/window. Furniture with soft seats and seat covers add comfort and also absorb noise.

5. Privacy is important.

Room dividers, desk screens and floor-standing screens all help to divide areas and create both visual and acoustic privacy so you can work with less distractions.

Acoustic products help create a balanced sound environment

Our acoustic products have been developed and tested together with acoustic specialists to ensure they meet sound absorbing and sound blocking requirements. Our designers put special focus on enabling fluid office spaces; and applying patterns, colours and materials inspired by nature. The thick, quilted screens create a warm and harmonious environment while also ensuring privacy between workstations.

The magic starts on the inside. MITTZON acoustic screens are constructed with a low-density fibreboard core surrounded by a thick, wood fibre filling with excellent acoustic performance. The screens are dressed with a thick, durable fabric that is removable/machine washable. The acoustic screen on castors is 50 mm thick and the desk and floor-standing acoustic screens are 80 mm thick, filled with goodness for your ears.

The filling contains 92% renewable and recyclable wood fibre content sourced from harvested trees which are debarked and chopped into small square chips, not much bigger than postage stamps. The chips are softened with steam and milled to obtain fibres. The fibres are dried and mixed with a bonding fibre, and then melted together into sheets that are cut to size. Left-over trimming is re-used in the production so that there is no waste.

Acoustic screens on lockable castors can be used to separate desks or create a meeting area. Notes can be pinned directly onto the fabric cover.

Acoustic screens for desks are ideal for creating privacy around your workspace.

MITTZON acoustic screens

"When designing MITTZON acoustic screens, I wanted to soften the hard and often cold feel of office furniture and looked to organic shapes found in nature for inspiration. The flowy pattern on the quilted screens remind of the sand ripples formed by waves on the beach. The screens are filled with 2 layers of wood fibres and covered with a thick fabric to ensure good sound absorbency. The rounded wooden rod that comes with the floor-standing screen is a clever detail that allows you to connect two or more screens, so you can create separated work areas for collaboration."

The desk screens do a good job at defining your personal space so that you will find it easier to focus. Open workspaces can be very challenging at times – but these acoustic screens will help to create some well-needed privacy and a sense of calm."

MITTZON focus workstation

"Welcome to my bubble! Have you ever felt the need to retreat into your own cocoon or place where you can work undisturbed? I know I have. When I designed MITTZON focus workstation, I wanted to create a private workspace that you can claim as your own for a while - whether it be in the office, lobby or hotel lounge. I love the playful design and hope it wakens people's curiosity. Everyone deserves a comfy cocoon where they can focus - away from all the buzz."

Acoustics in open work areas

The office layout strongly affects the sound environment and today, many offices are designed with open and flexible floor plans that expose us to noise and visual distractions. Luckily, these distractions can be reduced with good planning and a mix of solutions that absorb and block sound. Here are some things to consider:

Secure a good general noise level. Ensure good sound-absorbing elements on the ceilings and walls.

Divide the space by activity. If possible, place printers and coffee machines in separate areas/rooms. Plan open areas, such as entrance or lounge far from focus areas. Frames on castors with shelves, plants or whiteboard/noticeboard screens can be used to divide the space to define the different areas while also blocking the sound.

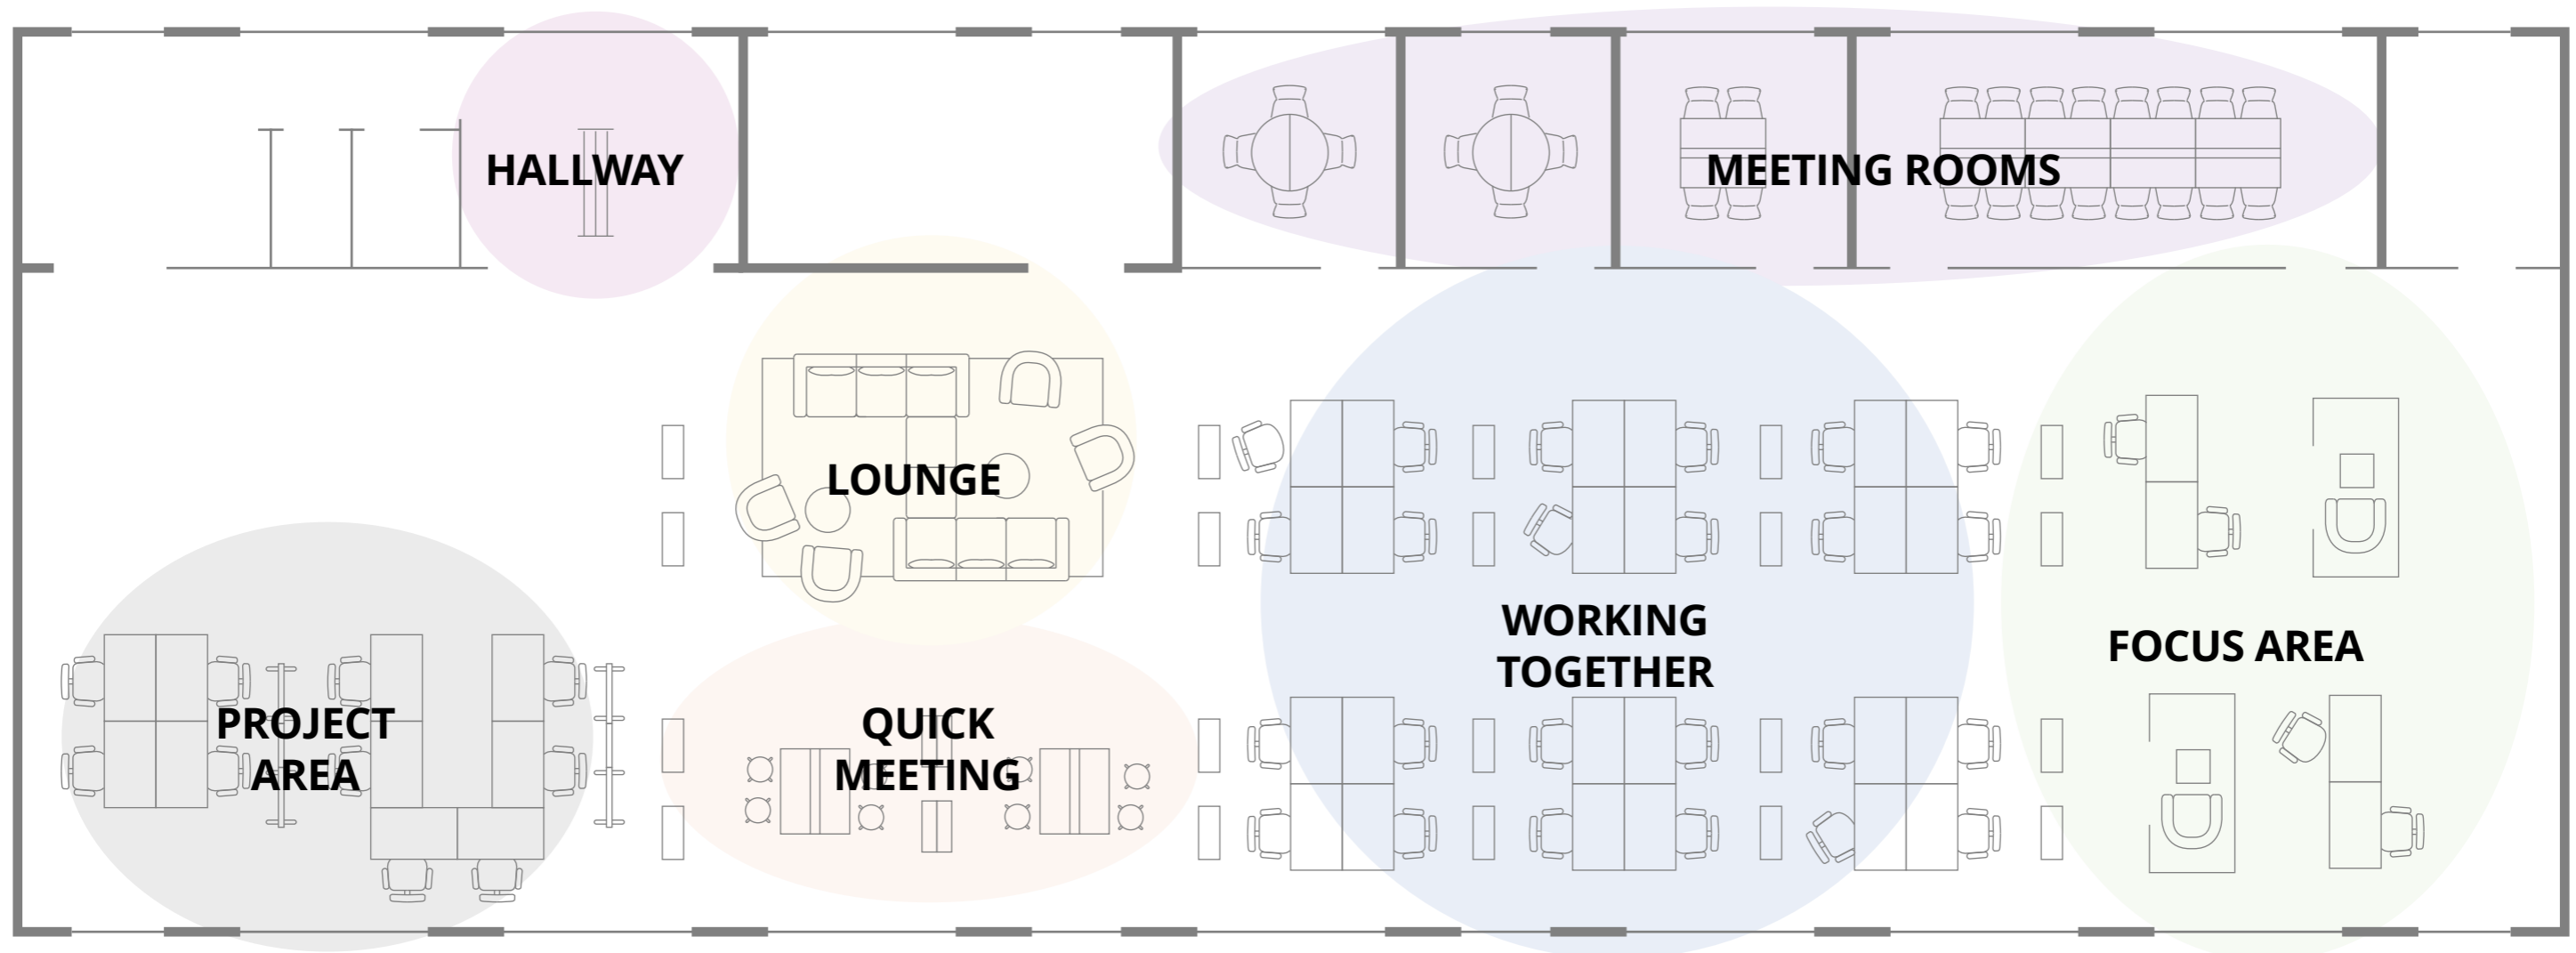

Divide the workspaces. Desk or floor-standing acoustic screens help create personal workspaces with visual privacy and effectively absorb sound.

Add elements to dampen chatter. When sound-absorbing elements are in place, colleagues can talk without raising their voices – which in turn keeps noise levels down. Textiles and sound absorbing screens help.

Hallways are many times over-looked in terms of acoustics. NÄVERHÄGG sound absorbing panels and rugs help to create a good balance.

Entrance/Reception/Coat room are often the source of noise coming from greeting visitors and colleagues before meetings. Acoustic screens on castors, plants and shelves enhance the environment and help to block and absorb sound.

Meeting rooms are generally closed and do not require sound blocking elements. Rather, it is important to use sound absorbing elements to prevent sound from bouncing around – but not too much as this will make voices muffled. NÄVERHÄGG sound absorbing panels, curtains and rugs help to create a good balance. Ensure flatwoven rugs for easy movement of conference chairs

Meeting spaces in the office

Digital, physical, long, short, formal or informal – every day we meet our colleagues, customers and partners in many different ways and modern workplaces need to provide a variety of environments designed to support efficiency and productivity through our comfort and well-being.

Formal meeting rooms need to be supplemented with a variety of flexible meeting spaces for different purposes.

High tables can be placed together and used while sitting or standing, helping to keep the energy up during workshops.

Flexible elements like acoustic screens, frames on wheels, storage units, plants or textiles help create rooms within rooms.

Open or semi-open environments are often conducive to teamwork, project meetings or spontaneous collaboration. They allow departments to interact more freely and contribute to an inclusive workplace culture. It also opens up the possibility to adapt the space after changing needs.

Different zones for different focus needs

When planning the office, consider the different environments and how they are placed in relation to each other. A good idea is to divide the space into different focus needs. For instance, a zone for working totally undisturbed, a zone where you can work focused but also discuss things with nearby colleagues, and zones for collaboration, activity and movement.

MITTZON frames on castors with whiteboard/pinboard provide a sense of privacy.

High tables combined with sit/stand supports enable participants to be more active, stand up and join in discussions.

A whiteboard/pinboard allows you to write or pin up all your great ideas.

In creative meetings and brainstorming sessions, it is important to be able to move freely in the environment to keep up the momentum and pace. This is also true for spontaneous meetings where the right setting can help strengthen cooperation and problem solving. For longer or more formal meetings, it is a good idea to arrange a closed room for privacy with comfortable seating.

Flexibility in the workspace

Change is part of the everyday reality in any workplace. Whether it be a re-organisation, a change of routines or new hybrid working patterns. To ensure that the workplace serves many types of functional needs over time while also promoting a sense of balance and well-being – the work environment must be able to adapt to the changing needs both in the short-term and in the long-term.

Day-to-day flexibility

Furniture gets moved around in the workplace all the time. Sometimes it is a matter of moving closer to a colleague to go through a presentation, or it could be about adding extra tables or chairs to a meeting room. For day-to-day flexibility, it is good to have furniture with castors that are easy to move to where they are needed, and just as easy to move back, fold and stack when not in use. Flexibility is also supported with multi-functional products such as MITTSON frames with castors to create mobile green walls or screens with whiteboards, that allow you to write key notes, wherever the meeting takes place. MITTSON laptop table on castors allows you to work where it suits you today – and you can easily change position from sitting to standing.

A height-adjustable laptop table with castors is ideal for presentations or to create a small workspace in the reception.

A high conference table for sitting or standing creates a perfect spot for spontaneous, ad hoc meetings.

Roll the table out and let the meeting begin. When it's time for a new activity, simply fold it and roll it back.

Time for refreshments? TROTEN trolley with castors is easy to bring to meetings or workshops.

Flexibility on demand

From time to time, functional needs may change – but only for shorter periods. A new project may require a dedicated area where a team can collaborate without disturbing others. Our MITTZON, IDÅSEN or TROTTEEN desks can be combined and moved around to create different solutions for working individually or together. You can fulfil your changing needs while also maintaining a balanced and uniform expression throughout the office.

A space-wise solution with individual workplaces that share the same storage in between.

Office chairs

All our office chairs are ergonomic and designed to support your well-being. This means they have good lumbar support and can be adjusted to suit your body and individual needs. Add to this, proper cushioning and breathable materials, and you are all set to work for longer periods with less fatigue and better focus.

Key features

A well-designed ergonomic office chair can solve a number of problems related to posture, comfort, and overall health:

It supports the natural curve of your spine and promotes good posture. This can prevent common issues like slouching and hunching over your desk. The chair should have adjustable features like seat height, seat depth, backrest tilt, and armrest height to fit your body dimensions.

By providing proper support for your lower back, an ergonomic office chair can also help reduce or prevent back pain. This is particularly important for people who spend long hours sitting.

Many ergonomic office chairs include a headrest, which can support your neck and prevent strain when working for long periods. This can reduce the risk of developing neck problems and associated issues like headaches.

Ergonomic office chairs have a synchronized tilt mechanism which allows the chair to move with you. This improves circulation and keeps energy levels up.

How to choose an ergonomic office chair

If there is one item that deserves special attention when you choose it for your workplace, it is your office chair. Beyond the aesthetics, there are features that can significantly impact your comfort, health and productivity. That is why it is essential to choose a chair that fits your body and work style, and to adjust it properly for maximum benefit. Here are some things to consider.

How many hours do you sit during the day?

The more hours you sit down, the better chair you will need. To make it easier for you to find a chair that suits your needs, we've divided the range into three recommended solutions:

Basic: If you rarely sit down during your work day, you can do well with a simpler chair with basic features such as height adjustability.

Occasional: If you sit down for short periods during the day, you will also need lumbar support, high back rest, automatic or adjustable tilt tension.

Full working day: If you spend most of your working day sitting down, you need an ergonomic chair with good adjustment possibilities.

Choose the mechanism that allows the right kind of movement.

Manual tilt tension

Allows you to adjust the resistance to suit your movements and weight.

Automatic tilt tension

Your body weight determines how much resistance the backrest offers.

Tilt lock

Allows you to lock the tilt in different positions.

Synchronised tilt mechanism

Allows the chair to move with you. The backrest moves more than the seat when you lean back, so torso/hips open up. This improves circulation and keeps energy levels up.

03

Does the chair tick these boxes?

Adjustability

Look for a chair with a variety of adjustable features. The more you can adjust the chair to fit your body, the better. Make sure to use all the functions of the chair and adjust it at regular intervals, to avoid a static sitting position.

Lumbar support

Good lumbar support is crucial for preventing back pain. The backrest should support the natural curve of your lower back.

Seat material

The seat and back should have enough padding to be comfortable for long periods of sitting. Breathable materials such as mesh allow air to pass through, and is a good choice if you tend to feel hot. Some chairs are made with a cooling effect material, also suitable for this purpose.

Swivel and mobility

The chair should easily rotate so you can reach different areas of your desk without straining. Castors allow easy movement around your workspace.

Stability

A five-point base reduces the risk of tipping over when leaning or moving in the chair.

Size

The chair should fit your body size. You should be able to sit with your feet flat on the floor, your knees at a 90° angle, and your back against the backrest. There should also be 5-8 cm between the back of your knees and the seat of the chair.

04

Look for these ergonomic features

Height adjustable seat; for a comfortable sitting posture regardless of body height.

2D adjustable armrests; height and width adjustable armrests enable a relaxed position for arms and shoulders and reduce the risk of tension.

Height-adjustable backrest; provides support in all the right places and helps your body to maintain a naturally good posture.

3D adjustable armrests; height, width, and depth adjustable armrest helps you find the most comfortable and supportive position for the arms and shoulders, leading to improved posture and reduced fatigue.

Adjustable lumbar support; helps maintain the correct posture while sitting which reduces strain on muscles on your lower back.

Manual tilt tension; allows you to adjust the resistance to suit your movements and weight.

Adjustable seat depth; easy to adapt for increased support to your thighs and back.

Automatic tilt tension; your body weight determines how much resistance the backrest offers.

Adjustable headrest depth; adjust the depth position of the headrest to fit your needs, reducing strain on the neck and shoulders.

Synchronised tilt mechanism; allows the chair to move with you. The backrest moves more than the seat when you lean back, so torso/hips open up. This improves circulation and keeps energy levels up.

Adjustable tilting neck support; adjusting the headrest angle for optimal support and comfort reduces neck muscle strain and prevents discomfort during prolonged sitting.

Tilt lock; allows you to lock the tilt in the upright, the lowest position and different positions in-between.

Adjustable headrest height; allows for proper alignment of the head and neck, reducing the risk of discomfort from prolonged sitting.

Removable washable cover, seat; easy to keep clean and fresh, as you can take it off and machine-wash it.

Armrests; provide support for the upper part of your forearms and reduce strain on the back and shoulders.

Removable washable cover, backrest and seat. The cover is easy to keep clean and fresh, as you can take it off and machine-wash it.

Room dividers and acoustic screens

Sharing a workspace with other people often means that there's going to be a lot of activity going on. Depending on the size and space of your office, it can be difficult to find a quiet spot where you can focus or where colleagues can meet and collaborate without disturbing others. The IKEA range offers solutions for creating separate spaces within a room while also helping to reduce noise.

How would you like your space divided?

Dividing space in your office can be achieved in a variety of ways for different purposes. Whether you need to create privacy for individuals within a large open floor plan, form areas for collaboration or provide a lounge where colleagues can relax with a cup of coffee, screens and dividers are the most flexible and cost-efficient way to adapt the space to make it comfortable, functional and appealing.

MITTZON frames with castors

A flexible system to divide work areas or create a room within a room. Dress the frame with your choice of acoustic screen, whiteboard/noticeboard, shelves, containers for plants, cable box or clothes rails.

10

As confirmation of the high quality, our MITTZON frames with castors and acoustic screens have been developed and tested for office use and are backed by a 10-year guarantee.

MITTZON floor-standing acoustic screens

The floor-standing screens help to divide space and reduce noise levels. They can be adapted to the specific size and needs of your space.

MITTZON acoustic screens for desks

The desk-mounted screens are ideal for creating privacy around the desk and can effectively reduce the buzz from the surrounding environment.

Key features

MITTZON frames with castors

Divide your workspace with greenery. The lush and vibrant tones of nature beauty creates a calm space to wind down or let the green leaves inspire your creativity.

Dress the frame with shelves to display items your company is proud of or to store things like binders, books and office supplies.

Dress the frame with a whiteboard/noticeboard and handy storage for markers, pins and other tools needed for meetings or workshops.

Dress the frame with clothes rails and shelves to create a practical area to store coats, shoes, bags and helmets.

Dress several frames with acoustic screens to create a corner for working together. The screens absorb sound and are perfect for pinning up notes.

When using LED lighting strip in the frame, the cables are led through the frame interior into the cable box and then to a socket.

MITTZON acoustic screens

The lightweight acoustic screens mounted on frames with castors are ideal to divide space for a meeting or workshop or to create a room within a room. They are easy to move around and stay in place when you lock the castors.

1. Work with sound absorption.

Non-porous materials like glass, MDF or concrete cause sound to reflect, creating echoes while porous materials like curtains, seat covers and rugs absorb sound. Acoustic products like desk screens and floor-standing screens also absorb sound and help to balance the presence of non-porous materials.

2. Block the sound.

Divide the space into separate acoustic zones using various types of barriers to prevent sound from traveling freely in an open landscape or between two workstations. Desk and floor-standing acoustic screens as well as acoustic screens on castors are ideal for this purpose.

Acoustic desk screens fit MITTZON desks perfectly giving you a calm and secluded workspace where you can focus.

Use acoustic floor-standing screens between desks or use several screens to form a focus area. Experience lower sound levels and greater possibility to concentrate.

What you need to know when choosing acoustic products

Our acoustic products have been developed and tested together with acoustic specialists to ensure they meet sound absorbing and sound-blocking requirements. This is what you need to know when choosing acoustic products for your office area.

Work with sound absorption and sound-blocking.

Acoustic screens for desks and floor-standing screens are ideal to block the sound from travelling in the room and to absorb sound waves. The acoustic screens are easy to move around (without changing the architecture of the room) and to create quieter spaces that are more conducive to working and collaborating.

Wood fibre filling with excellent acoustic performance

Our acoustic screens are constructed with a low-density fibreboard core surrounded by a thick, wood fibre filling that has been tested and proven to effectively absorb sound. The filling contains 92% renewable and recyclable wood fibre content and has excellent acoustic performance.

Easy maintenance

The acoustic screens are dressed with a thick, durable fabric that is removable and machine washable for your convenience.

How to mount the screens

It is easy to attach the side screen for desks using the included clamps. The back-mounted screens can be attached with the help of L-shape bracket. To connect 2 or more floor-standing acoustic screens use the included rounded wooden rods on the sides and the plastic clips. See more in the assembly instruction.

The back-mounted screen is easy to attach to MITTZON desk using the included L-shaped bracket.

The side-mounted acoustic screen is easy to attach using the included clamps.

Floor-standing acoustic screens can be connected with an included plastic clip.

The flowy pattern on the quilted screens reminds of sand ripples formed by waves on the beach.

Conference tables

The way we think about and plan our workspaces is changing with increased focus on creating spaces that make us feel comfortable, relaxed and empowered to focus on the task at hand. Many offices are becoming more activity based, meaning different settings are created for different purposes. When it comes to meeting spaces in particular, it is a good idea to create different solutions for both formal and informal meetings as well as workspaces especially suited for collaboration.

What types of meetings would you like to have?

Providing a diversity of meeting spaces with tables to accommodate the activity, sets the stage for comfort, well-being and higher productivity. Our range includes a wide variety of conference tables to suit your style, office layout and the type of meeting you would like to have.

Break out of the cubicle!
Areas for quick face-to-face meetings support the flow of creative ideas.

How to choose conference chair

Beyond the aesthetics, there are features that can significantly impact your comfort. That is why it is important to choose a chair that accommodates the types of meetings you have.

01

How long are your meetings?

A high table with sit/stand support is ideal for ad hoc meetings or to work whilst on the go.

For break-outs or more spontaneous workshops, a good solution is to use sturdy yet lightweight and stackable chairs that are easy to store away when not needed.

To keep your energy up during longer meetings or work sessions, we recommend chairs that are specifically comfy and kind to your body. Upholstered seat and backrest are essential, and tilt and heightadjusting mechanisms will enable individual comfort and variation.

Look for these features:

Lumbar support

Good lumbar support is crucial for preventing back pain. The backrest should support the natural curve of your lower back.

Seat padding

The seat and back should have enough padding to be comfortable for long periods of sitting. Removable and washable covers enable you to keep your meeting room looking fresh.

Swivel and mobility

Conference chairs that rotate, swivel and/or have castors enable movement and help to keep comfort and energy levels up.

Stability

A conference chair with castors should have a five-point base to reduce the risk of tipping over when leaning or moving in the chair.

Armrests

Armrests provide support for the upper part of your forearms and reduce strain on back and shoulders.

MULLFJÄLLET conference chair

Lighting and accessories

Good lighting plays an important role in enhancing productivity and well-being in the workplace. Not only does it help to increase the aesthetic appeal, good lighting also helps to prevent tiredness as well as strain on eyes, neck and back as a result of weak or poorly directed light. The IKEA range includes different types of lighting to cover your very needs, it also has accessories such as bulbs, cables, sockets, cable holders and more to make your place of work efficient and comfortable.

Different types of lighting for your workspace

When furnishing your workspace with light, it is good to know how different types of lamps spread light and how they can be combined to fulfil the various needs in the office. Good workspace lighting includes a combination of task lighting, general lighting and daylight that does not produce glare or reflections on the work surface. It also requires mood lighting to reduce sharp contrasts.

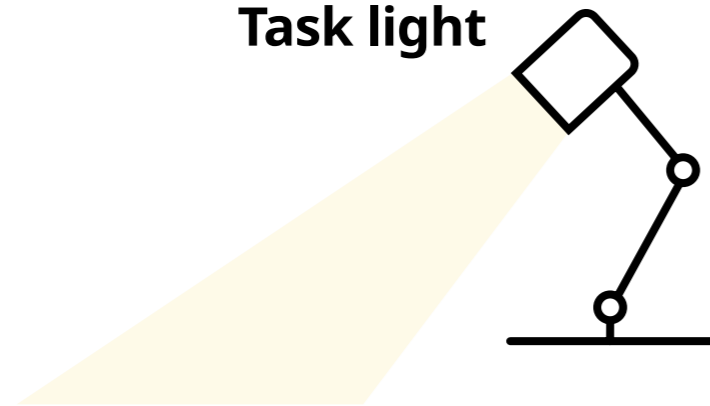

General light

Mood light

Task light

General light

General lighting, often from ceiling lighting provides a uniform light level throughout the entire room. It does not create significant shadows or sharp contrasts between lit and unlit areas. This type of lighting is ideal to create a good overview. Larger spaces often require larger fixtures to spread light. Larger pendant lamps can be a good way to spread an even light while enhancing the style of your interior. If you don't want the ceiling lighting to be the focal point, you can choose more discreet ceiling lamps.

Task light

Task lighting provides a concentrated beam of light over a limited area to enable specific tasks such as working at the desk or computer, or reading documents in a lounge area. Desk lamps and floor lamps with adjustable arms and head for directing light are good choices for flexible and effective task lighting.

Mood light

Mood lighting softens the contrasts between general and task light to create a cosy, intimate setting. To create inviting mood lighting, you can place table lamps in windows, shelves and cabinets where they illuminate at a suitable height. Floor lamps can be placed to light up dark corners. With little effort, your workplace becomes more appealing, relaxing and enjoyable to work in.

SKYDRAG – a perfect fit for MITTZON

MITTZON frame with castors combines perfectly with SKYDRAG LED lighting strip with sensor. When you dress the frame with display shelves and/or containers, you can also add the LED lighting strip to highlight objects or to create ambience in your workplace. The cables are nicely hidden as you can lead them through the frame interior.

With TRÅDFRI driver and RODRET wireless dimmer or STYRBAR remote control, you can easily turn on/off and dim your lighting. It is also possible to connect the lighting (and other smart products in our range, such as speakers or air purifiers), to the DIRIGERA hub which allows you to control them via the IKEA Home smart app on your mobile phone.

Complete your combination with lighting

How to build

SKYDRAG LED lighting strip is easy to install on your own.

- For MITTZON frame with castors, choose the 80 cm wide lighting strip to get sufficient light over the width of the frame. Place one lighting strip on the metal bar above each display shelf and/or container that you want to illuminate. You can easily hide the cable(s) inside the MITTZON frame for a tidy look.
- Connect each lighting strip to the TRÅDFRI driver (sold separately) and connect the driver to the plug using FÖRNIMMA power supply cord (sold separately). Hide the driver and cables inside the cable box at the bottom of the frame.
- You can easily turn on/off and dim your lighting or control the entire combination at the same time when you pair RODRET wireless dimmer or STYRBAR remote control with TRÅDFRI driver (sold separately).
- It is also possible to connect the lighting (and other smart products in our range, such as speakers or air purifiers), to the DIRIGERA hub (sold separately) which allows you to control them via the IKEA Home smart app on your mobile phone.

Note: You can connect several lighting strips to TRÅDFRI driver as long as the total wattage does not exceed the driver wattage.

Greenery and wall decoration

Enhancing your office space with carefully selected wall decoration and greenery may be just what you need to make your space feel more inviting, comfortable and inspirational. A large print with an inspirational motif, a framed message to reflect your company's mission or a mirror to add both style and practical use. Small details like these can make a big difference. When you also include some plants and pots, you not only enhance the aesthetic appeal, you are making the environment more vibrant and harmonious.

Let the greenery work

Invite greenery in to your workspace and let the vibrant, lush leaves inspire. Choose your favourite plants, from small to large, and combine with suitable plant pots from our large selection to create a style and look that harmonises with your office. If you are looking for less maintenance, artificial greenery may be the perfect choice – they look fresh and stay happy without the need for sunshine or watering.

Cultivate great ideas in your green oasis

Add a pop of green with small plants on a desk or shelf, or use large plants to create an impactful impression. Large plants or multiple small plants together can also be functional in unexpected ways – why not use them as lush room dividers to partially screen off an area, creating a feeling of privacy in your own calm oasis?

Wall decoration

Dress your walls with function and personality!

Where there's a wall there's an opportunity to enhance the atmosphere in your workspace while also adding practical benefits. Whether it's a wall space in the entrance, meeting room or office canteen, our range includes a wide variety of wall decorations to help complete your workspace.

Wall frames

A message or motif in a frame can turn a wall into a point of interest. LOMVIKEN and RÖDALM frames come in sleek designs that blend easily in most office spaces. Ideal for framing inspirational quotes, information or artwork.

Pictures and artwork

Have a large empty wall? BJÖRKSTA pictures with frames offer a variety of motifs so you can pick the perfect one for your office space, lounge area or waiting room – all are generously sized to make an impression.

Wall clocks

Every room in the office can do with a clock on the wall. Our range includes a variety of wall clocks that bring character and practical function to the workspace. BRAVUR wall clock is ideal for large, open spaces like the entrance or office canteen. The smaller BONDIS and PUGG wall clocks are perfect for meeting rooms and hallways.

Decorations

Textiles on walls can add detail and warmth to the room. Decorative NÄVERHÄGG panels up the cosy factor and can help dampen sound levels – they can also be used as pinboards to hang notes.

Mirrors

A good mirror is essential for checking your hair and outfit when arriving at or leaving the office. Timeless LINDBYN and NISSEDAL mirrors come in a variety of shapes and sizes and are a perfect complement to the coatroom.

Photo frames

A small, standing frame like FIKONTRÄD, is perfect for displaying information in a dining area or at a reception desk.
